Dr Yolanda Chan obtained fellowship in General Surgery in 2012. Since then she has shown great interest in the field of Breast Surgery, and has been paving her career pathway along this direction.

She was amongst the first who completed the one-year subspecialty training in Breast Surgery under the College of Surgeons of Hong Kong in 2014, and she is now a trainer of this programme. She was awarded Ho Hung Chiu Medical Education Foundation Fellowship 2014 for her postgraduate overseas training in the United Kingdom and France, concentrating in the areas of oncoplastic and reconstructive breast surgery. While working as an Associate Consultant at the Department of Surgery of Kwong Wah Hospital, she was a pillar workforce of the hospital's breast service, which has a well-recognized centre equipped with comprehensive facilities and multidisciplinary care.

In 2022, Dr Chan took up the challenge of setting up a Women Health Centre in a newly established private hospital, CUHK Medical Centre. She is eager to further equip herself to be in the forefront of health system leaders, as well as in all aspects to better serve the patients and society.
